

10H. FOR TRANSLATION:

Ulysses, king of Ithaca, was a brave and cunning soldier. However, when he was summoned to Aulis by Agamemnon, he remained at home. In order not to be compelled to go to war, he feigned madness. He is said to have ploughed the sand on the sea-shore.

Palamedes was sent by Agamemnon to find out the truth. He used a cunning trick. He placed the king's small son in front of the plough. Immediately Ulysses stopped in order to save his son.

'Do not pretend any* longer,' said Palamedes. 'You are not mad. Come with me. Let us set out to the war at once.'

Omit 'any'.*

Translate into Latin:—

1. The ships are driven to land by the Greeks.
2. Surely the Greeks and Trojans do not fear death?
3. We have decided to draw up the troops near the city.

6E. MIXED GRILL

1. The soldiers, ordered by the centurion, armed themselves.
2. This winter he is working in London but soon he will go to Athens.
3. Shall we be able to drive the enemy into the sea?
4. The old man is said to have burnt the house himself.
5. Did you see that letter lying on the table?

6F. GENERAL KNOWLEDGE

Sketch or trace a picture of a Roman soldier and mark in the following:— galea, scutum, gladius, pilum, pugio, lorica, sarcina, anything else you wish.